

FIG. 47.—American Enfield, model 1917. This gun was an adaptation of the British Enfield model 1914 design. It was substituted for the Springfield in equipping American troops because there was abundant machinery or its manufacture already in existence in the United States in the spring of 1917, while there was not sufficient machinery in existence for the manufacture of a proper supply of the Springfield, model 1903.