

FIG. 130.—Human skin one week after exposure to strong concentration of mustard-gas vapor. Edge of large vesicle showing the necrosis of the upper portion of the corium, congestion of vessels, and separation of the epidermis