

FIG. 163.—Cornea two hours after application of standard droplet of dichlorethylsulphide. First stage of necrosis of corneal epithelium and of the cells of the interstitial substance. Marked pycnosis of the corneal epithelium, the cells of the lowest layer alone being barely distinguishable. The nuclei of the interstitial substance and of the endothelial lining of the anterior chamber are also pycnotic. Section taken at corneal vertex