

FIG. 57.—Obliterating bronchiolitis in a dog killed 32 days after chlorine gassing. The main bronchus has a normal, probably regenerated, epithelial lining. The small tributary bronchus is occluded by an organized mass of tissue adherent to the wall in places