

FIG. 28.—Plastic procedure to protect the nerve from subsequent compression by turning down a flap of temporalis heads which is passed under the nerve, separating it from immediate contact with the bone; method of anchoring the flap. (Ogier. The Laryngoscope, 1933)